CONTENTS

Foreword by P. Hennipman	Vii
I. CONCEPTS, DATA AND THEORIES	1
1.1. Income concepts, inequality measures	1
1.2. Data: Changes over time	3
1.3. Data: Differences among areas	6
1.4. Theories: Stochastical elements	8
1.5. The human capital school	10
1.6. The 'opportunity school'	11
1.7. The education planning school	13
1.8. The need to consider both demand and supply	14

i Contents

2. A THEORY ON ACTUAL AND EQUITA-

BLE INCOME DISTRIBUTION	1
2.1. The role of welfare or utility in positive and normative theory	1
2.2. Measurement of utility: Total vs. partial measurement	23
2.3. Production functions as the background for demand	3]
2.4. Market and social structures	33
2.5. The race between technological development and access to education	34
3. HOW DOES SCARCITY SHOW UP IN
OUR RELATIONS?	37
21 The example of a surprostitution male time.
3.1. The essence of a quantitative relationship	37
3.2. Examples of misleading relationships	38
3.3. Statistical reasons for nonreliability	40
3.4. Differences in problem setting	42
3.5. Differences in modelling	47
3.6. Analytical vs. normative problems	5 1
3.7. Short-term and long-term problems	51 52
3.8. Sample size and dispersion	54 54
JW. DAHLDIC BIZE AIRRINGINICINICINIC	بها ( ز

Contents	xiii
4. CAN WE REDUCE INEQUALITY FUR-
THER?	57
4.1. Taking stock	57
4.2. Aims of income policy	59
4.3. Means: Education?	60
4.4. Means: Technological development?	61
4.5. Means: Taxes?	62
4.6. Income policies in our time	65
4.7. Further research needed	67
References	69

•